3. FINDING AND DISCUSSION

3.1 Finding

3.1.1 Richard Williams struggles in educating and training his two daughters to become successful world tennis athletes.

1) Superiority

Picture 1. Superiority

Richard: and you don't need to be worrying. About what other folks is doing anyway. You need to worry about what you doing. We out here getting great, that's what we need to be worrying about. You understand that?

All kids: yes daddy, we do.

In this scene, Richard tells his daughters to focus on what they are going to do and their life goals without having to be afraid and worried about what other people say. Richard said this intending to make his daughters feel confident in their respective abilities without fear of being commented on by others. Richard's actions provided a strong impetus to increase the confidence of his daughters in the future. Therefore, Richard's words and actions are following one of the principles of the Individual psychology approach, namely Superiority. From this, we know that Richard has a strong belief and great self-motivation to be an example and role model for his daughters.

2) Creative Power

Picture 2. Creative Power

Richard: Family meeting. We gonna watch something. We gonna watch it. We gonna learn.

In this part of the scene, Richard is seen telling the whole family to gather in the living room to talk about something. This section is included in the principle of creative power because of the actions Richard took to overcome his daughter's bad attitude about bragging and being too happy Richard came up with creative ideas to discuss and would learn together about what attitude to take. when they are happy with the victory they got.

3) Style of life

Richard: When I was your age, I used to have to fight every day. If it wasn't the Klux klan or the police... Or the white boys from the next town, somebody was always beating on me for something. And I ain't had no daddy to stand in their way. And I ain't had no daddy to stand in their way. But they gonna respect y'all.

In this part, Richard talks about his past as a lesson for his daughters, especially after the commotion that just happened, Richard indirectly explains to his daughters that they have a father who is ready to protect them under any circumstances and will not leave them. when they are in trouble. This part is included in the style of life because Richard tries to teach his daughters how to be grateful because they still have a father who cares and is ready to protect them in any situation.

4) Social Interest

Picture 3. Social Interest

Richard: uh when the girl was younger, I bought myself this camcorder So I film myself in the mirror. Asking questions, things, and such. Then when they got older, I start doing it with them. I called it their "media training".

Vic: I see. Well, that's very industrious

In this section, Richard explains how he educates his daughters and the media training he explains is one of the early educations taught to his daughters. This section is included in social interest because the media training taught by Richard is a form of good communication provision in the future when they are adults. After all, asking questions and having Q&A sessions will make it easy for their daughters to interact in a social environment with other people.

5) Subjective Perception

Picture 4. Scene 27:38

Richard: Oh. You just gonna be the crazy lady on the block. You gonna have any one of these houses you want. Beverly Hills, Hollywood hills, any of these old hills. 'Cause, you got a plan and you gonna stick to it.

This section shows how Richard happily interacted with Venus and Serena when they passed the luxury house complex, from this Richard instilled enthusiasm by giving hope that the two daughters could have everything they dreamed of including a luxury house in the future. This section is included in the Subjective Perception principle because Richard's hopes for Serena and Venus regarding their dreams and goals that have been planned by Richard will soon be realized in the future and this is related to their efforts and hard work to become world-class tennis athletes.

6) Self-Consistent

Picture 5. Scene 40:42

Richard: It's okay. They're just not used to seeing good-looking people like us. Okay. You just focus on the ball. Okay?

In the scene that shows Richard's family walking on the road to the field that will be used for the match, it looks like many white people are looking at them non-stop with various eyes and Richard feels that Richard calms his daughters, especially Venus who will compete not to think about the gazes that are directed at them and tell Venus to focus on their purpose here to compete this is what shows that this part of the scene belongs to the self-consistent principle because Richard can control himself so as not to be distracted by what skin people stare White who kept staring at them along the way and here Richard taught his daughters not to care about other people's judgments and told his daughters to focus on their purpose of being here.

3.1.2 Richard Williams's style of life is to motivate his two daughters to become world tennis athletes.

1) Time management

Before the daughters slept Richard again asked about the daily journal for tomorrow's plans and all his daughters said they had made a journal of what activities they would do tomorrow, this was done to educate their daughters to always manage schedules and organize activities so that their time is not wasted by doing anything. This can be seen from 12:52 to 15:22 at the beginning Richard told his daughters only one and a half hours left and after that, they had to go to bed, at ten o'clock at night Richard again reminded them of the time they were scheduled to have. sleep, here is the dialogue in the film:

Richard: Okay, girls, half an hour. Finish your homework, then get to bed. 15:14

Richard: Ten o'clock, girls. Time for bed.

Richard: all right. Did y'all write in your journals? Made your plans for tomorrow?

All kids: yes daddy. Richard: that's right.

Richard applies journaling to teach writing and communication habits and also teaches his daughters to be able to organize their time as well as possible so that no time is wasted.

2) Have good ethics

This scene is in the movie at 20:27 minutes, all members gather at the dining table to get ready for dinner, Richard reminds his daughters to pray before eating, and all immediately obey and say prayers together then after doing their prayers they just start to eat together, Richard's actions are a habit he has that he tries to apply to his entire family to teach proper etiquette and proper eating habits, this is done to appreciate the blessings given by God and be grateful for everything.

3) Love yourself and be proud to be yourself

This section shows how Richard always tries to create a motivational boost and enthusiasm for his daughters in reaching their dreams and this is shown in the form of motivational sentences taken from Richard's personal experience which is used as a motivational medium. This scene is in the film at 27:57 minutes, here is the dialogue:

Richard: When I was a little boy, my mom used to say, "Son, the strongest, the most powerful, and the most dangerous creature on this whole Earth Is a woman who knows how to think. Ain't nothing she can't do."

Richard told his past story which was advised by Richard's mother to Serena and Venus about the most powerful thing, the thing that has great power and is dangerous in this world is a woman because there is nothing that a woman can't do and after that Richard went on to say that Serena and Venus should be proud of themselves because they did what they did best. Richard's style of life has been possessed since birth and this stems from his life's journey, Richard teaches Serena and Venus about pride and love for themselves, which can encourage ambition in his two daughters who want to become tennis athletes professional.

4) Self-confident

Richard always tries to encourage and motivate his daughters not to be afraid of people's opinions about them, even though they are underestimated and underestimated by the people they meet, Richard always reminds them to stay confident because it will make them stronger than before. The scene that underlies the explanation is in the film at 58:30 minutes, the dialogue is as follows:

Staff : Good luck out there. Venus: Thank you.

Richard : Can't be the only Black people here and be late.

Richard always made a joke that was meant to motivate his daughter not to feel different by saying that 'being the only black person there so they shouldn't be late with a big smile and excited voice made Venus laugh. The form style of life that Richard teaches is to be confident and dare to step forward, not to despair even though they come from a minority race.

5) Responsible

The sense of responsibility to complete whatever has been done and become a choice is a big thing that must be taught by Richard to his daughters, Richard in his daily life has a very big sense of responsibility toward his entire family. This sense of responsibility was taught by Richard directly by taking an example from the scene where Richard found out that Serena was also competing in the same tennis competition as Venus without her and the others knowing. When he found out Richard was not angry with the decision taken by Serena to try to enter a tennis match without anyone knowing on the other hand Richard felt this situation was right to teach Serena how to take responsibility for what she had chosen and done. Here is the dialogue that takes place at the 59:53-minute scene in the film:

Richard: what are you doing? You done started, now you might as well finish. Go on. Just make sure to have fun. That's all we are here to do. Go ahead. Have fun.

When his daughters know about the importance of being responsible, Richard feels that he has succeeded in educating his daughters to be good human beings and also the path to their goals is not only found in physical exercise but in Richard's upbringing and training in achieving success also in balance, it by teaching them how to be human beings who have a good character so that they can inspire and respect others.

6) Dare to have an opinion and uphold the value of equality

The confidence that Richard showed to everyone about Venus' abilities and also Richard was not ashamed to admit their black race because here it is believed that everyone can do tennis when they are willing to put in the effort and practice. This situation is in line with the principles of the style of life from the theory of individual psychology approach because Richard can show confidence and believe that even though they are from a minority race, Richard can convince the people in front of him that Venus has extraordinary abilities. This explanation is taken by the author from the scene in the film at minute 01:04:36, here is the dialogue:

Richard :no, it's okay. It's okay I get it. You know, little Black girl, all-White sport. That's why we picked tennis.

Boss : well, that's exactly what we're talking about, Richard.

Boss :we think Venus could be very inspirational to a whole group of people. Quite honestly, as an industry, we have not done enough to reach. Venus can open a lot of doors. And we'd like to help her do it.

Richard upholds equality and dares to have an opinion even though he comes from a minority there. This is also taught by Richard to his daughters to understand that telling the truth is not a mistake so there is no need to be afraid to argue if what is said is a fact also Richard highly upholds the value of equality. After all, past experiences made him want to prove that all people can do whatever they want regardless of race or skin differences because everyone is free to do whatever they want.

7) Work hard

Everyone will try anything and put out their maximum energy to achieve their life goals, that is Richard William who has great ambition to realize his plan to make his two daughters become professional tennis athletes who have many victories that inspire the whole world. Of course, this requires enormous hard work and a strong effort to make it a reality. Richard does not want his daughters to be lazy when they have big life goals, therefore Richard educates very firmly to tell his daughters to work hard if they want to make their dreams come true, this was done directly by Richard in the scene in minutes 01:06:27 in the movie when Richard walks out and approaches Serena and Venus not to eat anything or accept any gifts from the places they visit, here is the dialogue from the scene:

Richard :where is the food I packed for you? Other girls: It's no big deal, Mr. Williams.

Richard :Nothing for free. Somebody's paying for it.

Richard does not want his daughters to be used for the benefit of others because they have received gifts, therefore Richard wants to be firm to teach Serena and Venus to work hard in all their actions if they want their life goals to be achieved and their dreams come true because by working hard, we will know how our true potential is and that is what makes a person always practice to improve his skills and not be lazy because he feels he has achieved everything.

8) Have no envy and low self-esteem

Envy will arise when one sees the achievements of someone superior to them as well as a sense of inferiority always arises when someone feels that he cannot do anything that others can do. Richard did not want that kind of attitude and character to be possessed by his daughters. Richard always puts himself in the middle to monitor everything that is experienced by his daughters. Richard always tries to be fair in giving attention, support, and learning. Like what Richard did when he saw Serena alone looking at the field where Venus would play the final. Richard didn't want Serena to feel left out of her sister's previous success. This scene is in the film at minute 01:56:22, the dialogue is as follows:

Richard : Can I tell you a secret? Your sister is gonna be number one in the whole world, no doubt it.

Serena : I know that.

Richard : but you, you gonna be the best there ever was. You gonna be the greatest of all time. Do you know how I know? 'Cause I planned for it.

Richard seriously assured that Serena would be the greatest ever because Richard had it all planned and it would happen any minute. Through his words, Richard tried to make Serena's ambition bigger and more confident about her potential and Richard did not want Serena to feel sad because she had not achieved success like Venus. With that Richard indirectly taught Serena not to feel jealous and inferior because everyone has a different process in achieving their goals. Everyone has different abilities and different times of achieving success and Richard wants Serena to believe in that.

3.2 Discussion

After collecting the data of the research results in this section, the author will group and discuss the results of the research carried out following the purpose of this study. this research. From the results of research on Richard William's struggle in educating and training his two daughters to become world tennis athletes, researchers found that the form of struggle that Richard in making his two daughters into world tennis athletes was associated with Alfred Adler's theory of Individual Psychological approach based on six principles including Superiority, Creative Power, Style of life, Social Interest, Subjective Perception, Self-consistent.

As we know, seeing Richard's struggles in trying to bring his two daughters, Venus and Serena, to become world-renowned professional tennis athletes, Richard has to do a lot of upbringing and training at all costs. Seen from his tenacity, he is always confident and unaffected and feels rivaled by other people who also have the same goals as him. On the principle of superiority, the action that embodies the principle is through his words encouraging his daughter not to worry about anything and they should do it according to the principles and goals without having to worry about the moves of others because all they have to do is focus on themselves and don't worry. worry. afraid that someone else will take your position. Richard demonstrated the power of believing in himself without having to worry about being defeated by others and Richard's words matched the explanation of the principle of superiority. Richard's struggle was very hard because to realize his dream of making Venus and Serena into professional tennis athletes he had to accept the pleasantries and doubts from many people with who he offered to work together to train Serena and Venus.

In the scene where Richard shouts excitedly to push Serena and Venus out During practice, Richard tells his two daughters to show how dangerous they are which means Richard wants Serena and Venus to show the tennis skills they have trained since childhood and this stunt also boosts confidence self-esteem, self-respect and pride in Serena and Venus about being able to play tennis. Another passion and encouragement that underlies Richard's struggles in educating and training Serena and Venus are that Richard always looks proud and confident when talking to people and also proves that Serena and Venus can play tennis like professional tennis athletes.

In the scene where Richard shouts excitedly to push Serena and Venus out During practice, Richard tells his two daughters to show how dangerous they are which means Richard wants Serena and Venus to show the tennis skills they have trained since childhood and this stunt also boosts confidence self-esteem, self-respect and pride in Serena and Venus about being able to play tennis. Another passion and encouragement that underlies Richard's struggles in educating and training Serena and Venus are that Richard always looks proud and confident when talking to people and also proves that Serena and Venus can play tennis like professional tennis athletes.

Another form of Richard's struggle in realizing his goal of making Serena and Venus into world tennis athletes is how Richard tries hard to learn things about how to become a professional tennis athlete, the steps to playing tennis well, and all things related to tennis. , Richard did all these things in between his time working as a security officer and it can be seen from the 17:31 scene where Richard is seriously trying to learn and understand all the theories he reads. Richard did this so that he could coach Serena and Venus while waiting for a professional trainer who was willing to work with them. Richard's struggle was solely to realize his goal of turning Serena and Venus into professional athletes. Furthermore, it still shows how Richard struggles in educating and training his two daughters to become professional tennis athletes, Richard always tells and teaches Serena and Venus to believe in their abilities and don't be afraid, this can be proven from 35:03 minutes when Richard tells Venus who will be competing to be prepared for whatever happens which means winning or losing won't be a problem because Richard wants the match to add experience to hone Venus's tennis skills, so Richard makes encouragement so that Venus is confident in her abilities and doesn't worry whatever scares him.

4. CLOSING

After analyzing the film King Richard (2021) based on individual psychology theory, the author gets the results from the data needed and here the author explains the result of the analysis regarding how Richard William educates and trains his two daughters to become world tennis athletes and what style of life Richard has to motivate his two daughters to become world tennis athletes. King Richard (2021) is a film adaptation of the true story of the father of two world professional tennis athletes, namely Serena and Venus William. This film contains a biography of the life of Richard William who struggles to achieve his goal of making his two daughters become world professional tennis athletes who can be proud and motivate everyone. This film is very good work because the true story raised in it gives a dramatic impression of the reality of life and this film has many moral messages that can be used as inspiration and motivation for everyone. Based on the research data that the researchers have collected in the previous chapter, the following is an explanation of the conclusions of the research conducted by the researcher:

First, the struggle of Richard William in educating and training his two daughters to become world tennis athletes, the researcher will explain the conclusion of Richard Williams's struggle in educating and training his two daughters to become world tennis athletes. It was a tough struggle and required various efforts to educate and train his two daughters, Richard faced all the problems and obstacles regarding this matter, but Richard had an unyielding attitude and tried to solve the problems that came one by one. In educating his two daughters Richard was firm by always trying to prioritize formal education even though they were going to become tennis athletes.

Richard maintains a strict and regular schedule making sure to balance their learning activities because Richard doesn't want his two daughters to neglect school because they have to practice tennis every day. Another thing that Richard did in educating his two daughters was to give direct or indirect examples of good ethics and attitudes to apply in their lives so that they always love themselves and respect others, Richard does this to ensure that his two daughters have the attitude and ethics who is good as an adult and becomes a successful and world-famous professional tennis athlete. Richard always gives advice and motivation to his two daughters so that they learn how to deal with problems and they can approach life with a good view, this is done by Richard to encourage the passion and ambition of his two daughters to achieve their goals in the future, following Richard's struggle to train his two daughters to become professional tennis athletes, Richard distributed all brochures and proposals to all important people in the tennis field to get financial support regarding the costs of training and equipment for his two daughters. In addition to this, Richard also made a remake video about his two daughters' training activities to prove that the people who were invited to work together believed in their two daughters' abilities. Another thing Richard tries hard to learn about all things tennis and how to become a successful tennis athlete for his two daughters, and Richard tries hard to offer a partnership with a professional tennis coach to train his two daughters to achieve their goal of becoming world professional tennis athletes.

Second, Richard William's style of life in motivating his two daughters to become world tennis athletes, Richard William has a personality who is always responsible and has big ambitions and clear goals from this we can ensure that Richard is a father who has good qualities in living his life and these things have led to his goal to apply his style of life to his daughters. Time management is applied in the lives of their daughters with the aim that their daughters can have good time management and are also disciplined in carrying out all the activities they do so that they don't waste time on activities that are not useful. Having good ethics, Richard always tries and makes sure his two daughters have good ethics because this is very important to apply since they were small so that they always behave politely and respect others when in the family or community environment. Richard tries to make his two daughters have a sense of self-love and pride in being themselves because it will build confidence and confidence in all their activities and success. Responsible, Richard also applies this to his two daughters to give them confidence and teach his two daughters to always finish what they start. Dare to have an opinion and uphold the value of equality, an important thing that Richard applied to his two daughters to make them the right to have an opinion and voice for things related to the truth. Work hard, it is very necessary to make all dreams and goals come true. And the last one is having no envy and low self-esteem, which is very important because Richard doesn't want his two daughters to be proud of their success and doesn't want his two daughters to feel sad and inferior to other people's bad comments about their lives.
