A. Background of The Study

People were born with the two kinds of sex, male and female. Actually the term male and female rose in society because of the different biological organs, so they treat male and female in different way since they were young or even since they were in their mother’s womb. People have basic trust that male have to be strong, powerful, and think rationally while female is powerless, emotional, and weaker than male. Its differences and also the patriarchal line that held in societies are automatically make the different treatments to the two sexes.

Actually gender difference is not a problem as long as it does not cause inequalities of gender. But, in fact that gender differences cause many inequalities moreover women, because woman is known as a weak person who has low power in society. Those phenomena cause many unfair treatments toward women like sexual harassment, violence in the households, violation, negative judgment, economical poverty, etc.

One of the problems which is often faced by every human being especially, women is how to stand up their right and not allow their male dominated society to define what it means to be women. Women them selves must show their capability, to prove who they are and what role they will play in society. Most importantly, they must reject the assumption that woman are inferior to men. Therefore, according to Mandell (1995: 5) that every person has equal opportunities and civil right and they should be allowed to exercise freedom of choice without interfere of public opinion on or law.

Oppression of women in the patriarchal society is seen daily. Men dominate women in so many ways; it becomes hard to distinguish one form of oppression to another. Women are exploited and face oppression every day. In the work place women are forced into low paying, insecure and unskilled jobs. Women problems do not stop at the work place. When they come home, they have to face another shift of housework for their family. Actually, women also have to deal with violence in family life. Traditionally, women and men have accepted the fact that men have rights in public or political lives but women do not. Many stereotypes about women’s nature and roles hold that women have been viewed, to some degree, as inferior. Through history, women have been labeled physically weaker than man, more emotional, less reasonable, less able to learn, and dependant. Therefore, women’s public decision making has often been dismissed as illogical, emotional and subjective. Men’s on the other hand, has always been considered logical, rational, and objective (Horton and Hunt, 1996: 157).

From the phenomena of women’s problem in sex discrimination in the form of sexual harassments, the researcher is interested in this research because North Country is very interesting film, especially its story which obviously describes the success of women’s struggle to find equal sexual treatments from male co-workers and the employers at the work place and also the chance to work normally as the men that is related to feminism. Women development cannot be separated from the influence of feminists’ movement. The meaning of feminism is a belief in the social, politic, and economic equality of the sexes, and a movement organized around the conviction that biological sex should not be the pre-determinant factor shaping a person’s social identity or socio-political or economic rights.

In North Country film, there is a main character, named Josey Aimes (Charlize Theron) is single parents for her two children, she has a bad stories in her past life. She lives with her parents and she works as a washing hair in local salon for earning some money for her kids. When she works, she runs into an old friend, Glory (Frances McDormand) gives information to her that there are some good jobs with great paying available to women in iron mines. She does not have too many options, she has kids to feed and she can not live with her parents forever, and that iron mine job pays 6 times what she makes from washing hair, so she accepts than she goes and applies. Before they hire her, they have to do a pelvic exam in order to prove that she is not pregnant. She and her kids move in Glory house after she applies for the job. Then they see her and the other women orientation. When the women start working, they get introducing from their shift leader who is clearly relishing the opportunity to abuse and sexuality harasses them. When the women start working, they see pictures with their names written on the walls. Josey goes and talks to the supervisor about the unacceptable working conditions. But he clearly states to her that nobody wants her there and nothing is going to change. Josey gets home loan, buys her own house and provides all the stuff that her kids want and need.

There is up-hill battle for the company to provide portable toilet for the women. Glory explains to management that it takes women no longer to use the bathroom. A worker named Sherry (Sean Bean) goes to use it. The guys stand around and inform her that they have taken a big dump in it before she enters. When she goes in, they knock it over with her in it and she hurt and very traumatized. At the point, Josey is taking one day off work to go to the city for a formal meeting with the owner, Mr. Pearson. He tells her if he will “help” her by arranging for her to quit. She protests that she does not want to quit.

One day, the women are called to clean up a big dump mess which looks like defecation on the wall. Then Bobby calls Josey to do a job for him. She follows him to the private place and he attacks her. She announces that she quits. She finds a lawyer then she is meeting her friend Bill White (Woody Harrelson). She tells him if she wants to file sexual harassment charges against the company. He warns her that she is not likely to win, but he later reconsiders and asks if she can get the other women to collaborate her story so they can file a class action suit. At first, nobody wants to help her and the Pearson brings Bobby Sharpe and her old teacher as a witness that Josey has sexual relationship when she was 16. But Josey lawyer reminds the judge that they only need 3 plaintiffs to file the class action. Glory suddenly motions, from her wheel-chair, in the back row of the court room, that she backs Josey. And at the point, Sherry stands up. Then half of women in the court room that work in iron mines stands up like Sherry. Then they see many people all over the court room standing including both men and women at the mines and Josey parents too. Finally she is living a life of quality and being respected and for all the women can work with no worry about sexual harassment.

North Country, which is inspired by true events, sets itself up for a courtroom finale - and indeed, there is one - however it is not strictly a legal docudrama. Woody Harrelson's lawyer is a more interesting character than most lawyers, while the revelations about Josie's life that unfold during the trial add depth to what might otherwise be a straight issue of legal culpability. The plight of Frances McDormand's character Glory, played with typical aplomb, and the epiphany of Josie's parents make this film much more human than it otherwise might have been. It is the strong cast and the thoughtful screenplay which lends this movie impact. In North Country film, feminists have taken many different approaches to the analysis of cinema. These include discussion of the function of women character in particular film narratives or in particular genres, such as film noir, where a woman character can often be seen to embody a subversive sexuality that is dangerous to men and is ultimately punished with death. Through the use of various film techniques, such as shot reverse shot. The viewer is led to align herself with the point of view of a male protagonist. Notably, women function as objects of this gaze far more often than as proxies for the spectator. Feminist film theory of the last twenty years is heavily influenced by the general transformation in the field of aesthetics.
Many authors pay attention to women’s oppression, one of them is Niki Caro. She was born in 1967 in Wellington – New Zealand. She completed a Bachelor of Fine Art at Auckland’s Elam School of Fine Art in 1988 and followed it with a Postgraduate Diploma as a Writer/Director at Swinburne Film and Television School in Melbourne. (http://www.imdb/name/nm0138297. Oscar-winning actress Charlize Theron and acclaimed director Niki Caro (“Whale Rider”) brightened the red carpet at the Hollywood premiere of Warner Bros Pictures' dramatic film, "North Country." Both women looked absolutely stunning as they joined the cast of "North Country" for a special screening of the film at the historic Graumann's Chinese Theater in Hollywood. As a writer she had several books; The Vintner’s Luck (2009), Whale Rider (2002), Memory & Desire (1997), Sure to Rise (1994). And as a director she had directed several movies; The Vintner’s Luck (2009), North Country (2005), Whale Rider (2002), Mercy Peak (2001) (TV series), Memory & Desire (1997), Sure to Rise (1994). North Country tries to show the ordinary circumstances of recent women oppression, and the evasive action might provide a permanent solution. The director challenges the oppressed women to rise above her limitation as a person in the North Country movie version. In this case the main character is Josey Aimes, a woman who finds herself and other women in iron mines by abusing and getting sexual harassment. North Country is a film Presented by Warner Bros. Pictures in association with Participant

North Country reflects women’s struggle in order to find the equal treatments in work and sexual treatments.
