CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of the Study

Writing is a part of English skills which plays an important role as a medium of communication. In this modern era, people who have writing skill will be proud because they can give and take information easily. They can persuade someone or a group of people to trust or to convince what they say and do. It can be also as a medium to get job, and a way to express emotion, and to admire god's creatures.

Actually many people can write, but writing here means not only that simple one. Good writing is one that is composed correctly with the attention to some important elements, such as: content language use, vocabulary used, organization used, and mechanic.

Using writing language form or writing is not only mold the information, message, or idea in the sentence that must correct in a grammatical manner. The information, message, or idea must be created in text form that have purpose, rhetorical structure, and linguistic realization or grammatical patterns. Each written texts must have clear purpose, that all of information, message or idea must be created effectively in one form of the texts (descriptive, recount, narrative, exposition, procedure, anecdote, news item, discussion ). By amount of this text elements in a rhetorically manner must rhetorically structured, that is molded in sentences created by using precise and effectively grammatical patterns.

It means that to consider the effectiveness of using language, each form of written texts preferable is created based on genre. Genre can be defined as a type of the text functioned as a frame of reference, so the text can be created effectively; in purpose, election, and arranging of text elements, and accuracy in using grammar.

In genre concept, there are 11 types of texts. They are: description, recount, narration, procedure, explanation, discussion, exposition, news item, information report, anecdote, and review. Each type has different in purpose and rhetorical structure.

In genre of exposition, there are analytical exposition and hortatory exposition. Analytical exposition is a type of text that is precise to argue that something is the case. While hortatory exposition is a type of the text that precise to argue that something should be or ought to be. Hortatory exposition has the same purpose as persuasive. In here , the writer wants to focus on persuasive. Especially in persuasive essay.

Persuasive essay is the most difficult level of writing type. This is so because beside giving reason clearly and logically, a writer should find the issues with two or more side, and he or she should identify the readers in order that messages can get the target in writing persuasive essay, a writer has to demonstrate in using between fact and emotion. If persuasion is all emotion, it may seem that the writer has no really thought the matter carefully. If persuasion is all facts than appeal, it may seem the impersonal, mixture of the two is usually the best persuasion.

In writing persuasive essay, the students must have capability to write. Capability is ability or qualities necessary to do something. The teacher must lead his or her students in developing writing persuasive essay, it is one of the ways for increasing the students' capability.
