1. INTRODUCTION

Conversation within a movie sometimes shows directive utterances between the listeners and the speakers, listeners must be careful in catching the meaning. Actually, in daily life we perform acts such as requesting, ordering, recommending, warning, and so on. In real life, we may face speeches in different places. In home, in school, in public places, on the television, and many other, listener should know what speaker wants by way of speech. Hence, we can determine what action that should be taken, whether we will agree or refuse the message. Listeners could know what the speaker meaning of a speech by studying speech act. Austin (1962) in his book “How to do things with words” stated that saying something is to do something. It means the speech that we hear is an action to influence us to do something. In expressing what they want and feel, people can express in various ways as though direct and indirect. Searle (1996) explained that he has classified speech act into five kinds. One of them is the Directive Act (DA). Directive Act is an act that appears from the utterance that is said by the speaker to the hearer to do something or take an act based on the speaker wants. In reality, there are still difficulties to understand what the speaker wants or meaning.

The characters are used a British accent, therefore it will difficult to interpret. The meaning of their speech depends on the situation even sometimes it does not relate to the meaning of what they are saying.

Based on the phenomenon, the writer formulates the problems: 1) to identify sub directive utterances which are found in the movie “The Theory of Everything” and 2) to describe intentions of using sub directive utterances in the movie of “The Theory of Everything”. The researcher uses Kreidler’s theory in analyzing directive utterances.
