ABSTRACT

This research is about a man named Charlie who has a personality that is different from the others, namely introverted in the novel The Perks of Being of a Wallflower by Stephen Chobsky (2012). This study used the theory of Psychoanalytic Approach. There are three objectives in this study. First, to found charlie’s behavior as the main character in the novel. Second, to describe Charlie's behavior as an introvert. Third, to found the effects of introverts of Charlie's behavior. This study used a qualitative method. In this study, primary data and secondary data are data sources used by researchers. Primary data comes from Stephen Chobsky's The Perks of Being of a Wallflower published in 2012. Secondary data comes from websites, theses, articles, and several books related to this novel. There are three conclusions from this study. First, Charlie has three behaviors such as shyness, hallucination and loner. Second, Charlie has four behaviors as an introvert, namely social introvert, thinking introvert, anxious introvert, and restrained introvert. Third, there are two effects of Charlie's behavior as an introvert, namely the effects of psychology and social communication.
