ABSTRACT

The main problem of this research is cancer. Someone who has their cancer must experience a major change in their lives. The purpose of this study is to analyze this novel based on a sociological approach. The author uses qualitative methods. Author uses two data sources: primary and secondary. The primary data source from this study is the novel The Fault in Our Stars by John Green. Secondary data from this study were obtained from some information related to the novel. Data collection method is descriptive qualitative. Based on the analysis, the researchers came to several conclusions. This research raises the problem of the main character and figure about cancer. This is proven by their lives that they are facing cancer. However, cancer does not prevent them from achieving their dreams. The main character’s view of death and the process of death has changed from distrust of the afterlife to his belief that death is not the end of everything and the existence of the afterlife.
