ABSTRACT

This research is entitled “Social Class and Its Implication in The Rescue Policy in Titanic Movie (1997): A Marxist Perspective. This research aimed to identify the indicators of social class found in Titanic movie and to analyze the implication of social class in the rescue policy in Titanic movie based on Marxist perspective. The data were taken from screen capturing the scenes and copy paste the dialogues containing indicators of social class and its implication in the rescue policy in Titanic movie. The result showed three indicators of social class namely economic background, facilities on the ship, and service on the ship and the implication of social class in the rescue policy showed that most of the first-class passengers are had a higher chance of survival than third class passengers.
